Third /Fourth year students of Nursing, Physiotherapy and Podiatry degrees

BRIEF DESCRIPTOR

Elective subject that would integrate students from the three degrees taught in the Faculty of Nursing, Physiotherapy and Podiatry, based on the "service-learning" methodology.

It offers the student the possibility of learning through its involvement in the service to the community, participating in projects that will be developed in collaboration with public institutions (municipalities, community of Madrid, hospitals, etc...). That will allow students to acquire skills and academic learning in real environments, while doing a community service. It is a teaching strategy based on experience and social responsibility.

This subject might allow the students to understand the usefulness of the learned knowledge for improving quality of life of the society, addressing new challenges and motivating them in their social commitment.

OBJECTIVES

- To create an active and critical culture in the students who attend this subject.
- To acquire skills for reflection, self-evaluation and recognition of their own and other values.
- To develop teamwork skills and solve problems in a non-habitual social environment.
- To foster personal development, generating skills for interaction and consensus building.
- To strengthen the values of solidarity, justice and social commitment.
- To improve academic training through social responsibility, identification of problems, action and reflection.
- To promote habits and health care for the wellbeing of individuals, families and communities.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Once the course is completed, the student will be able to:

Propose and collaborate in health promotion initiatives in interdisciplinary contexts.

Improve academic training through social responsibility, identification of problems, action and reflection.

Perform a comprehensive and systematic assessment of the health care needs of a group or community, formulate, the plan of the intervention to be carry out in collaboration with the people served.

Develop the plan of intervention.

Evaluate the progress made in achieving the expected results, in collaboration with the population group in which it is involved.

Use the evaluation data to know the final results and to improve, if necessary, the established care plan.

TEACHING ACTIVITIES (theoretical, practical, seminars, workshops, etc.)

Classroom activities:

- 8 hours of periodic seminars/workshops (discussion, design, adequacy, and scheduling of the service to be carried out) along with on-line didactic support activities.
- 12.5 hours of Community service activities participating in the different projects planned (intervention in the population, social entities, associations, or center destined for it).

Non-classroom activities:

- 45 hours for the designed activities, elaboration of the intervention plan, organization, and registration of activities, individual and/or teamwork. Preparation of audiovisual material appropriate to the characteristics of the target population. Individual work: development and elaboration of the "field notebook".
- 7.5 hours elaboration of a final Report for the student.
